

By visiting the stands of publishers from Turkey at the London Book Fair and by reading the various catalogues, you will have a better idea on the wealth and diversity of literature in Turkey, as well as on our publishing sector. The catalogue contains information on publishing houses and institutes which make up a large share of the publishing sector in Turkey and are all leaders in their respective fields. The aim of this catalogue is to provide you, in a structured manner, with the names of the publishing houses, their profiles, their field of activities, as well as the names and addresses of important contact persons.

BOOK TRADE IN TURKEYZERRİN YILMAZ, AKIN DİRİK

The book trade forges links between cultures. In other words, it is the heart and soul of intellectual life and is one of the essential characteristics of any modern country.

The reforms in the field of education were one of the first changes that took place after the foundation of the Turkish Republic. The Latin alphabet was introduced and, thanks to a large-scale and comprehensive initiative, the literacy rate was substantially boosted over a short period of time.

As the result of the long war of independence, as well as the weakened economic and social system of the Ottoman Empire, a private sector with sufficient financial resources for investments at its disposal did not exist in the young Republic.

At the first congress of the publishing sector in 1939, new initiatives and solutions were debated. Despite prevailing ideological differences, the founders of the Republic decided to assign the State with this task. The Ministry of National Education became the most significant publisher and was responsible for printing all national text books. Masters of classic literature were also translated into Turkish and published by the Ministry.

Turkey started changing due to new economic policies introduced during the 1980's. The State's share in the national economy and industry decreased, the obstacles arising from the tariff system were removed, and Turkey opened itself up to international competition. These developments in turn also had a positive effect on the publishing sector and the number of private companies started to increase rapidly.

Cooperation between Turkish and international publishers started to develop. The publishing sector in turn started to develop a more modern perspective. New publishing houses were founded and across Turkey new book shops opened. New technological developments in the publishing sector were also introduced on a large scale. In short, the publishing sector experienced a dynamic and rapid development.

The Turkish Publishers Association was founded in 1985 with the aim of protecting and representing all the publishers' interests. And in 2002 it became a proud member of the International Publishers Association (IPA).

The publishers also took further steps in terms of organisational structure and in the years that followed they founded the Association of Press and Publishing, as well as other professional associations.

Freedom of thought, of publication, as well as the freedom of expression, are the key principles of the Turkish publishing sector. Current efforts made by the Turkish professional associations have been internationally praised by the IPA as exemplary.

Cultural Dialogue

Books play an essential role in the shaping of cultural dialogue. This phenomenon connects countries, not only in the material sense, but also intellectually, and this in turn brings them together in friendship and cooperation. Both East and West are equally represented in the Turkish national identity. We know the cultural, geographical, and political characteristics of both cultures and this knowledge is our footing for international dialogue.

In order to promote the Turkish language, the Turkish culture and publishing sectors, new projects are initiated such as the newly founded Yunus Emre Institute which is set to carry out similar activities to those of other prominent institutes like the British Council, the Goethe Institute, or the Instituto Cervantes. Furthermore, several publishing houses were supported in a number of countries in the framework of the TEDA Programme, with the aim to present Turkish literature to the world.

HISTORY: NOBEL Akademik Yayıncılık is a publication company based in Ankara-Turkey. Its roots go back to "Atlas Kitabevi" and "Nobel Yayıncılık", a publication and distribution company. Both were founded by Nevzat ARGUN in 1984 and 1997, respectively. Publication and distribution functions were separated in 2011. Since then NOBEL Akademik Yayıncılık has only been publishing academic books. Nobel's publications are available at books stores around Turkey, and online book purchasing is possible at www.nobelkitap.com.

Nobel has published over 2000 titles to date. Most of the titles are original textbooks written by Turkish professors. However, especially in the last five years the number of translations has gone up considerably. About 60 translated titles were published in 2012. Currently we are working on about 150 translation titles.

FIELD OF ACTIVITY: Most of the titles published by Nobel Akademik Yayıncılık are academic books in the areas of education, psychology, economics, business administration, communication, international relationships, science, mathematics, engineering, physical education and sports.
